Register a motorised wheelchair

Mobility devices, such as wheelchairs and mobility scooters are an essential part of daily life for people with a mobility impairment. Not only do they improve access to everyday services, but they can also greatly enhance an individual's quality of life. If you use a motorised wheelchair or scooter on a footpath or road area in Queensland, it must be registered.

Fees and charges: Registrations of motorised wheelchairs are free. There are also no transfer, number plate or compulsory third party (CTP) insurance fees. To register a motorised wheelchair, you will need to visit a transport and motoring customer service centre

“The contents of this article do not constitute legal advice, and are not intended to be a substitute for legal advice and should not be relied upon as such. You should seek legal advice or other professional advice in relation to any particular matters you may have”.

When using a motorised wheelchair outside of the home, for example on a footpath, the person using the motorised wheelchair is considered to be a pedestrian under the Queensland Road Rules. This means a motorised wheelchair (including mobility scooters) can only be used where a pedestrian can travel, referred to as pedestrian travel routes. A person using a motorised wheelchair, or any other pedestrian must: Remember our roads are shared roads.

Use the footpath or nature strip where available, if there is no footpath or nature strip available, or there is an obstruction that needs to be avoided, the person must travel as close as possible to the left or right hand side of the road—you also should face oncoming traffic if possible cross a road by the most direct route and use a crossing where available.

In addition to the above general rules, a person using a motorised wheelchair must also exercise due care and attention for the safety of others at all times, including travelling at an appropriate speed (which depending on the situation may be less than the maximum speed of 10km/h).

A gated community refers to any type of estate whereby security measures regulate the entrance, and thus section off the internal roads from the main adjoining traffic areas. This includes golf estates, retirement villages, townhouse complexes, and housing estates. There appears to be a lot of confusion regarding the application of road rules within these gated communities. Do Road Rules Apply Inside Gated Communities?, yes they most certainly do.

In the event of severe injury or fatality a myriad of legal issues would be raised, such as whether the road is a public or private road, if the regulatory signage and markings were in compliance with legislation, and was any other person or party responsible through their carelessness other than the relevant driver.

Quite simply, all regulatory and other road signage, road markings, Continued

→ the positioning thereof, and the control and the use of vehicles on these public roads is no different to the public roads outside of the gated estate. Hope this is helpful. More information regarding our roads should be forthcoming. Including the use of golf buggies etc.

For Residents Information. There are two organisations which may be of help to homeowners, you should think about joining either one.

See web site: arpq.org.au

2. MHOA. Members are entitled to all possible assistance in understanding their rights under legislation, setting up and running home owner associations and committees, and in dealing with disputes in a park including advice, letter writing, assistance with complaint procedure and submissions to the Tribunal. To see that the law involving manufactured and relocatable homes is duly observed and enforced in the Courts on Queensland.
